Study: One Vote Can Turn an Election in North Carolina

Does one vote really make a difference in an election?

A new study from the nonpartisan voting rights group Democracy North Carolina shows that in a surprising number of cases a handful of votes can determine who wins or loses, especially in odd-year municipal elections like those now underway across the state.

By analyzing elections held in November 2015, the organization's researchers identified 69 cities in NC where the mayor or a town council member won their election by five or fewer votes.

In 31 cities, how one person decided to vote made the difference in who won or lost.

"I was surprised to see how many places had very close contests," said Bob Hall, Democracy North Carolina's executive director. "Of course, many of these are small towns but the elections involve mayors and even several ties settled by a coin toss or another method that follows state law."

In the Sparta in western North Carolina, one candidate in a tied-vote election for town council called heads – and lost. A coin toss also broke ties for council seats in Sylva, West Jefferson, Clarkton (Bladen Co.), and Godwin (Cumberland Co.), while drawing the winner's name from a box decided a council seat in Dover (Craven Co.). In Garland (Sampson Co.), the tied candidates put colored pens in a box, and the elections board chair picked the winner, a purple pen.

The mayors of Spruce Pine (Mitchell Co.), St. Pauls (Robeson Co.) and Biscoe (Montgomery Co.) squeaked by with one-vote victories. Mayors in 9 other towns won by five or fewer votes: Angier (Harnett & Wake Co.), Atkinson (Pender Co.), Cooleemee (Davie Co.), Mooresboro (Cleveland Co.), Newton Grove (Sampson Co.), Roxobel (Bertie Co.), Sylva (Jackson Co.), St. Paul (Robeson Co.), and Teachey (Duplin Co.).

Other cities with races settled by 5 or fewer votes in 2015 include Bladenboro, Bryson City, Chadbourn, Creedmoor, Lumberton, Marshville, Nashville, Oriental, Plymouth, Ramseur, Wallace, and Whiteville. (A complete list is below).

"Local elections are where citizens can have the most impact and, vice versa, who they choose has a big impact on their lives," said Sunny Frothingham, senior researcher at Democracy NC. "The winners oversee the police, decide funding for vital services, shape neighborhood development, set tax rates, and more."

"These local officials may win by a narrow margin, but history shows they may eventually become a state legislator or even member of Congress," she added. "Participating in local elections can have an immediate impact on voters' daily lives and shape the pipeline for political leaders long term."

Early voting continues in most towns until 1 p.m. on Saturday, November 4.

On Election Day, November 7, polls will be open from 6:30 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. People in cities with elections can see their personal ballot by following the directions at demnc.co/ballot.

Close North Carolina Elections in 2015

The spreadsheet below shows mayoral and council contests in 2015 that were decided by 5 votes or less. The yellow highlighted rows show the winning and losing candidates for a contested seat. For example, in an at-large race where 3 candidates with the most votes win (i.e. # Seats =3), the highlighted rows show the candidates with the 3rd and 4th most votes, with the 4th place finisher losing by 5 or fewer votes. (If there is a tie for 4th place, both candidates are highlighted.)
